Hehe, besides, I believe it was Guitar Pro or Administration of terbutaline in pregnant women with non-stress-induced premature labor. A randomised, double-blind, placebo-controlled study. Terbutaline, a beta2-adrenergic agonist, was administered by the intramuscular route to 30 pregnant women with preterm labor. The patients were randomised to receive either 5 mg terbutaline or placebo every four hours, and the treatment period was continued until childbirth or 37 weeks of gestation. The duration of preterm labor and the number of patients with delivery before 37 weeks of gestation were significantly reduced in the terbutaline group as compared with the placebo group.

Furthermore, the incidence of fetal distress was significantly lower in the terbutaline group than in the placebo group. No significant differences were found between the terbutaline and placebo groups in the number of neonates with fetal distress, prematurity, Apgar score at one and five minutes, low birth weight, or admissions to neonatal care. Two newborn infants in the terbutaline group died of intracranial hemorrhages. There were no maternal side effects. It is concluded that intramuscular administration of terbutaline may be of value in the management of preterm labor without gestational age limitation. Q: Is a SSL certificate meant to be transferred from one machine to another I am currently working on a project where I need to pass a certificate file from a client machine to a database. Here is the transfer process in some detail. A user presses a button that starts a thread. The thread checks the current date, and if it is less than 3 days before the certificate expires it would do this. I would use openssl to generate a new certificate with a newer date. The thread would go on, generate the new certificate, send the new certificate to the server. The communication is simplex and the only thing that can fail is step 5. It would not be the desired process to have a socket live for more than 1 month because the certificate would be expired, but I cannot do this. As far as I know it is safe to send this certificate from one machine to another (means the machine from which I generate the certificate would be safe from the certificate) So, I was thinking if this is the correct way to do this or if I can be worried about anything. Thanks.
