At the 2013 GeekWire Summit, we unveiled our new brand, The Nerd Fuel Store. It features two editions: a Core edition for those readers who may not need a whole enchilada, and an Enchilada Edition for the rest of us. Every year we hand select the best stories from the year's best tech stories, launch new podcasts, and help finance this community that we love. It's an award-winning event that brings together the very best and brightest of the tech community. One of the main reasons we like to focus on this community is the relative lack of infighting. We love the collaborative nature of startups as well as the rockstar engineers and hustlers that make it happen. For example, you probably heard about the recent kerfuffle in the Seattle Startup community that led to the firing of popular Seattle tech blogger, and journo/publisher, Wayne Roth. Roth was known as the go-to guy for anything Seattle. I felt badly for Wayne as he lost everything he had worked for his entire life. He was a good friend, a good person, and a good reporter for GeekWire. That being said, in his interviews with guests, he was generally perceived as leaning towards the negative side of things at times. We like to have interesting people working 3da54e8ca3
