, Volume 2 The Book of Shadows, Volume 2 is a 1993 American horror film starring Bruce Davison, Robert Forster and Melanie Griffith, directed by Bernard Rose and written by Gary Goddard. It is the sequel to The Book of Shadows, which had won the Silver Bear and Golden Bear awards in the Best Foreign Film categories at the 42nd Berlin International Film Festival. Plot The story continues on the first film's events after Donald leaves Alison following his stint in the military. He is seen working in a photo booth for a carnival. After a round of sex, Alison discovers Donald is cheating on her with Glenda. After finding a trail of blood inside of the house, Alison is told of a new presence around the home: ghosts. She hears voices at night. Alison's old boyfriend Hector tells her he and his friend Skip want to take advantage of her pregnancy, and will abduct the baby. He goes to visit Alison at the carnival, where he tells her that his friends killed his family in a robbery and are out for revenge against her and Skip. Alison gets Hector and his friends arrested for crimes against humanity. He tells Alison that the ghosts are real, that Skip called them up from the dead when he and Hector had kidnapped Skip's little sister. Skip comes to the carnival, telling Alison that Hector has escaped, but that he cannot reveal this to Alison while she is pregnant. When Donald explains that the birth control devices in his and Alison's old apartment were missing, Skip and Hector decide the government has been tracking his activities. Skip tells Alison to deliver the baby now, for he has plans to kill Donald once the baby is born. Alison gets Donald a job at a photo-processing outfit, but he is nearly fired when he forces the nightlights on in the dark building, revealing that he and Alison had lived there before. Alison suspects that Donald has lost his mind and calls a doctor friend of hers. She receives a call from the doctor, informing her that Donald is in a state of schizophrenia. Donald goes on a bender with Hector and Skip, and tells Alison that Skip has been unhinged by nightmares created by Hector. All three end up in a state mental hospital. When Alison goes to visit Donald in the hospital, she is horrified to find he is not the jovial, intelligent young man that he had been described as; Donald is far from mental illness. She rejects Skip's advances, but he demands that she let him sleep in
