Become the fastest in New Rush City, delivering pizza, burgers and other goods in your zippy car, The Best! What's included in this Pack: - All four new characters in all four new colours! - 16 new character icons - 2 unique vehicle types: rocket car and firefly - 4 vehicle accessories - Unique music tracks for all four characters Possible in game effects: - New skins that can be selected for the four new characters This update will be applied automatically. You don't need to do anything, but if you don't see the new characters, please restart the game. SpeedRunners 2: Civil Dispute adds a variety of new features to the already massive Speedrunners 2: Civil Disobedience gameplay. For starters, the Time Trial, Speedrun and Info Annoyances will now have no cap (other than number of characters), further expanding their potential To celebrate the launch of Civil Dispute, SpeedRunners 2: Civil Disobedience will be on sale for 2 weeks! You can download the game for $29.99 for the PS4 or $9.99 on Steam for the PC. NOTE: We have added 'completionist' features for both the Teampay and Car Racing Minigames, that will check if you can complete certain content in the game. You will be notified about those when you are first playing the game. Any other additions, changes or fixes that aren't mentioned above will be announced when the DLC is available. It was a risky and bold move by the studio to announce a 1 week only sale on a major franchise, but it looks like they've sold out of stock already! Civil Disobedience will be available from Tuesday 7th August. Buy it on Steam - Buy it on PlayStation 4 - Speeding down the first section of the course, you're on the chopping block if you make a single contact with an opponent. But you need to get past them to reach the finish, so keeping a tight rhythm and zoning out in your new rocket car should be enough to beat out your opposition. The new city of New Rush City has been built from the ground up published:17 Oct 2017 views:116442 On the 25th April 2015, 20,000 people marched through the French capital for the first time with the #NousToutes (We're all women) movement. The movement grew out of the 14th February 2016 killing of 40-year-old woman, Anne-Florence Le Duff, by her estranged husband in their home in Garges-Le-Gervais. From the BBCNews website: BlackFrenchwomen march after 'We're all women' attack by 'mysterious stranger' Campaigners led thousands of people in the French capitalParis in a silent march and rally over the weekend. A group of around 20,000 people demanded justice and safety for women after the 15 March attack. The march took place against a backdrop of police investigations into the death of a French woman whose body was found in the River Seine. The woman has not been named, but French press say she was Anne-Florence Le Duff. The 46-year-old was allegedly attacked by a 'mysterious man' in her home in Garges-Le-Gervais, a small town just outside Paris. Mrs Le Duff worked as a hairdresser, and had been separated from her husband. She suffered facial injuries in the attack and later died in hospital. Police found her strangled in her home, and her husband was arrested shortly afterwards. Flowers are left at the site of a suspected'mysterious stranger' attack on a woman in Garges-Le-Gervais, central France, on 15 March 2017. - Ep. 1 :: Anarchy Porn by Submerged Republic The RPS podcast has a yearly tradition whereby I curate a series of albums that in some way or another helped shape me as a person. These aren't any kind of mere accolades - these are some of my favourites ever. The last time I did this kind of thing, I said I might do it again, but I didn't really follow it up. This year, I'm going to keep doing it. Not necessarily annual paeans to the age of downloads. Or devotional compositions that crackled like a bonfire of sacred laws. It's not that kind of album. It is about two things, the first being an aesthetic. I would not say it has to be Alice in Chains, a black-eyed belter. I mean, bands that are all-in are amazing. But The Holloways are pretty much all-in on its weirdness. The other thing about this kind of thing is that it's not just about the music, but about how the music makes you feel. There is a sonic quality in something like a John Carpenter score. Just like this album (sorry, I'm completely going off topic now). This album has a particular look and feel to it. A bit like Close to the Edge, or the scary eeriness of Cure's Disintegration. It's probably going to be a little dissonant to some people, but I love it. Whatever you're playing, try to imagine the weather. This is very foggy. I'm going to wind up going off on some alt. history bullshit in a minute, though. Since you're listening, I assume you're not too committed to Wikipedia or other such helpers. Note: I'm going to be talking about stuff that was going on in the past decade. So if you have no idea about stuff from that year, that's fine, just bear with me. It's all completely relevant. 1. A Relentless Pursuit I'm just going to talk now. So, the story begins in 2005, or maybe earlier. As I'm sure you know, I got into hardcore a few years after I stopped being a hipster. My friends forced me to do it when I was around 15
