“With ‘HyperMotion Technology,’ we wanted to get player feedback from a real football match,” said Julian Banfield, Senior Producer, FIFA. “The techniques and feedback have come together to create a totally unique experience, with genuine football feeling. We used many ‘algorithmic calculations’ to achieve this.” The upgraded game engine and innovations to team and player AI will be further enhanced by the use of “Player Intelligence,” which analyses the way players move and behave in real matches. “Player Intelligence” goes beyond the game engine’s on-field physics and takes into account how players behave in real life situations. For example, it will dynamically adapt game behavior based on how well a team is playing, and a player’s position on the pitch, allowing both to make the right decision to help a team win. “The AI system is re-written for each specific style of play and we’ve also been able to introduce team-specific, competitive play styles,” said Banfield. “In the past, FIFA would make game mechanics of a certain type of play a priority. This has now been turned on its head, allowing the AI to adapt to the player’s style of play.” “We have completely re-written the decision-making of players and their AI in all aspects of gameplay,” continued Banfield. “AI improvements include defender and goalkeeper pursuit and awareness, handling skills and chasing, as well as new tactical and off-the-ball behaviour for defenders.” FIFA 22 introduces a major overhaul of player movement in both the creative and defensive systems. Players now show more intelligence in pressing, blocking, feinting and under-hit shooting. They are also more effective in controlling the ball when they are surrounded by players. Properties of the player’s boots and how they wear on the pitch will now have a major impact on how quickly a player can change direction. “In the past, player run animations were often heavily influenced by the player’s position on the pitch – and often a game mechanic – and this is something we wanted to change. Because players are now intelligent, they now react to the movements of their players around them, rather than just reacting to specific game mechanics,” said Banfield. In addition to these significant
