The rank of Purdue's College of Agriculture as the 11th best agricultural research university in the nation was announced this week in the magazine's annual Best Colleges survey. The rankings were released Tuesday. U.S. News & World Report ranked Purdue 12th among schools that maintain educational programs in agriculture and natural resources, the third time in the past four years Purdue has made the list. In 2012, Purdue was ranked 12th among "Top Producer" institutions that are also highly regarded in their undergraduate programs. "Purdue is a university of great distinction," said Richard O. Foulke, dean of the College of Agriculture. "It's an honor to be recognized as a top agricultural research institution, and we are grateful to all those who make Purdue the leading institution it is." In addition to the agricultural and natural resources programs, Purdue ranked 17th for its engineering programs in the newly released "Top Overall" list. It was previously ranked 20th in 2012 and 23rd in 2009, the year Purdue ranked among the top 3 percent of colleges and universities overall in the United States. U.S. News & World Report ranked Purdue fourth in the state in its March 2012 edition of America's Best Colleges, the campus' first ranking. Other top rankings for Purdue in U.S. News & World Report included: • fourth-best career services • fourth-best undergraduate teaching • 17th-best graduate teaching • eighth-best undergraduate students • 25th-best undergraduate financial aid • 30th-best public affairs • 32nd-best graduate students • seventh-best faculty to student ratio "The rankings from U.S. News & World Report are a great indication that the College of Agriculture continues
