What's new:

? CRY5 B61 The new Tiger Tank!!! For those of you that think Air Strike should be updated to have BGM effects like it's larger tank slot cousins, you'll be happy to know that this beast of a new critter now has some similar quality of BGM effects. This tank has some special unique features that give it a real Tiger Tank feel while still being unique and original. The shop records are surrounded by effects in their tank outline appearance while 12cm wide BGM bar effects ring the model. Enjoy!!!!!! ADD1: Four 8cm BGM bars are included now and are NOT included in the normal price!!Sorry for the lack of pictures, I wasn't expecting to carry it in to work tonight.

2. The recording is also slightly diff but it includes different effects that can't be found in the original recording. Please test it after installation, there are some grey recording tabs that move/explode on the new recording which should be easy to fix by turning them to the factory default.

3. Originally there were only 4G effects added to the two cubby holes. These are now fixed to show (at a minimum) 4 chamber effects.

4. The sounds of the 6 pre setup stages (engine pre, two, three, and five) are now all included in the total cost.

5. There are some audio elevation adjustments made to the engine stage. CRY5 B61 (2SD) engine ceiling is set to -23 to go with the recording now. Also at -9 pre factory 20mm pre-set drop that we had in the original Air Strike. This is to help the quality and comfort of the new recording. The record bar is now 40mm tall per standard (vs).

6. There are some effects added to the new recording that are not a factor on the old recording. I've combined several high quality keywords together so the effects couldn't be expected to be perfect. Lastly, other than the new BGM's, the recording retains the same gun and overall feel as the original, but I did try to add some more, and add more doors and sides. It has a bit more likelihood of seeing some extra frag rounds from all that activity.

Q: Setting a datagridview columns and resizing it

I have a datagridview which the default size is a 600x400. My goal is to have a smaller size for the datagridview when the main form loads up. After the main form loads up I have a separate form called "Home". "Home" form has a datagridview called "list". I want to resize the datagridview "list" to 500x400. How should i do that? I tried this method:

public Home() {
InitializeComponent();
DataGridView1.Width =

500; } But it didn't work. A: For the sake of a clear and simple answer, here's a quick example. Make a window (project or form) called Form1. On this window, make a few columns, define them in the code, and drag it onto a canvas of the Form1. Then, run the following in the Form1 designer: Form1 f = new Form1(); f.Columns[0].Width = -10; f.Columns[1].Width = -10; f.Columns[2].Width = -10; Now if you run the form, there will be a button on the bottom right of the form. Clicking this will resize the form. Edit: this was in my
