What's new:

Corporation Apostle 3D Corporation is a large privately held New Jersey-based spatial engineering and engineering analytics company serving the civil and industrial construction markets. Founded in 2001, the company is composed of an integrated group of companies managing more than of analytical and survey software, point cloud data, additive manufacturing and fabrication services, mobile and optical scanning, and computerized measurement technologies. Corporate details Apostle 3D's headquarters are located in Mount Laurel, New Jersey. This is also where the company's marketing, design, sales and support departments are located. Its corporate engineering research and development office is located in Princeton, New Jersey, and its corporate development office is located in Reston, Virginia. The current President and CEO of the company is James R. Maloney who succeeded Randy Paolillo when he retired in 2011. Paolillo held the position of President and CEO from 2001 to 2011. In addition to his company position and its responsibilities to its stakeholders, Paolillo is Director of the Princeton Entrepreneur Society, and for seven years was Director of the Education and Civic Engagement department of the Princeton Public Library, where he was also a member of the governing board. During his time as President and CEO, Paolillo oversaw a change in the company name from ZiHere to Anthill Software before changing it to Apostle in 2002 and finally Apostle in 2006. At the time of Paolillo's retirement, there were over 11 employees and the company revenue exceeded $40 million. In 2015, the company announced that Maloney was its new president and CEO. Information on the history of the company dates back to 1997, when Jeff Seigel founded iPrint Studio, a company with the intent of developing a 100% CNC and CAD controlled and managed 3D prototyping, manufacturing, and production system. From late 1998 to late 2000, Jeff Seigel collaborated with Warren "Tiger" Maher, Eric Mattson and a team of friends, including Bill Bender, to develop and build a HP Laserjet Printing Aid. The Printing Aid was a small device that interfaced with a Hewlett-Packard Laserjet and printed out a family of pre-recorded HP Laserjet sheets on card stock that produced a three dimensional picture. The Printing Aid's 3D creation was generally limited to either walls or objects that could hide internal detail. Construction and civil engineering (CE) Apostle Software's vision is to provide clients with improved design
